Thoughts from Rev. Philip Bromiley

Halloween and All Saints.

The name “Halloween” is a Christian word meaning, “the eve of All Hallows” (the eve of All Saints), but that is the only Christian element in it. In Pagan tradition, it is believed that after sunset on Samhain, the spirits of the dead and evil spirits roamed the skies seeking to harm humans, especially if the dead had been harmed by them.

For protection, people disguised themselves by dressing up in costumes and carrying lights inside turnips (not pumpkins). The Christian Church did what it does best: it turned a pagan feast into a Christian one. The Church adopted 1st November as the feast of All Saints and celebrations began the day before. If you look around the shops at the moment, you’ll probably notice that “All Saints” has very little to do with the merchandising.

When my daughter Rosie was three, she asked me a very pertinent question as we did our shopping in Sainsbury’s. “What’s all these scary faces for?” (We were walking past a row of masks, pumpkins, skulls, blood, gore, you name it). She was genuinely afraid and upset by them. It made me think too... Does society really need more fear? Scripture says, “perfect love casts out all fear.” I don’t know if you get “trick or treaters”, but perhaps you could remind the children that love is far better than fear... our world needs more of it.

When I remember the departed, I remember those who have gone before us, living lives of love and now enjoying the presence of God in heaven, bathed in light and love.

As we approach too Remembrance Sunday, we call to mind the Scripture, “Greater love, has no one than this, to lay down his life for his friends”.

Dear Residents, Please slow down

We live in a beautiful part of the countryside and thankfully have very few anti-social issues. However we have received an increasing number of complaints from residents concerned about vehicles speeding in the Parish, much of which is 20 mph for good reasons. In many cases we know it is us, the residents, who are speeding. Please, for the safety of all, can everyone check their speed. The Parish supports Speedwatch and we know that traffic on the A345 is prone to speeding, this is now managed through Wiltshire Council Highways. Enford Parish Council.

Starting A Garden in Summer 2026

Autumn brings the 2027 plant and bulb catalogues, and a time for reflection...

I moved to new home with a compact garden that seemed ideal, a 25 foot border, 3 foot deep - a chance to make a small and perfect plot.

But this is 2026 – an exceptional summer, which confounded my plans and stressed my new plot. Though the tomato harvest was small, there was an abundance of failed hopes and some unintentional successes....

In April I brought some favourite plants from my old garden – Japanese phlox, magnolia, gaura (Sparkle White) a white forsythia, mint, and 3 big pots with citrus plants. All to be woven together by waves of blue nigella, planted at intervals for an azure band for months. Good idea, right?

I dug, added leaf-mould rich as chocolate, sprinkled bonemeal. Ready! Among the first admirers of my new patch were inquisitive ants, who thought the citrus plants were for their aphid farming expansion plans!

The plants settled into the border. With gaps, yes, but garden centres provide! So, curry plants, white geraniums, nemesia (Wisley White) – and a pack of pink dahlia tubers. Finally, nigella seeds (Moody Blues) sprinkled throughout.. stand back and wait.

Luckily, the digging, weeding & planting were done before the first heat wave so only the plants suffered heat stroke, not me. Nigella germinated fast, but burnt off just as fast. Under the summer blaze, the lobelia plants just keeled over. The dahlias, (intended for late summer glory), started growing as soon as they were planted, elbowed aside the phlox and the gaura, shaded the geraniums and curry plants, and brandished large candy-pink flowers with zero vase life, but gave joy to neighbours. The phlox managed to lean around the dahlias to make themselves visible. The forsythia & magnolia have remained unhappy; if there were social workers for plants, they would have been taken into care by now! There are three small green lemons on the lemon tree – will they grow big enough for January marmalade?

So, what have I learnt from a new patch in a time of climate change? What I have always known – that the garden in my mind is always the best ever.

My Remembrance Day never made the news
The day I served and saw action is not important to others.
No one is solemn or stops to reflect,
Bright clothes are worn and celebrities the only gossip.
No one gathers around cenotaphs and monuments,
I am alone on my Remembrance Day.

The guns were not silenced on my Remembrance Day
They were so loud there was nothing else.
It was the fourth day of the new offensive,
Little ground was made, but it must be done.
Me and Tommy had made it through together,
Till then. I'll not forget him on that day.

The action did not cease on my Remembrance Day,
It was the waiting that was over; the action began.
I landed in the drop zone - 3 minutes late mind
Don't tell the boss though, he never has found out!
That day I became a man; it was the start for me
The end for so many though, but I'll not forget them.

My Remembrance Day was just another day,
Not too quiet, just the usual: till the roadside bomb.
We never saw it come; we were travelling too fast.
No one panicked though, the training just kicked in.
But this isn't what we signed up for; an invisible enemy
No one to fight, no way to defend ourselves.

My Remembrance Day was over before 11 o'clock.
The dawn rain, the ambush, withdraw, the missing in action
"Leave no man behind" that's what we say.
So that's what we did, back in we went.
Holding on to the winglet, the four chosen volunteers,
As every man stepped forward to save the one man lost.

I'll step down now, say not another word
I did my bit and I'm content with that.
You have your Remembrance Day
Your minute's silence and marching band
I'll live with the burden of my Remembrance Day
You'll not remember me on my Remembrance Day

Wildlife Watch

Read owl about it!

Salisbury Plain is one of the prime locations in the UK for seeing owls and raptors, supported by dedicated conservation efforts like the MOD Raptor and Owl Nest Box project. All 5 species of British owl can be seen on the Plain, so you may well have been lucky enough to see one in and around the village.

- Barn Owl - Distinctive for its ghostly white body and heart-shaped facial disk, this elegant native owl is frequently seen silently gliding low over farmland and rough grassland.
- Tawny Owl - The UK's most common owl, this stocky, mottled-brown woodland resident is famous for producing the classic nocturnal "twit-twoo" call duet.
- Little Owl - Britain's smallest owl is only 20cm tall. It was introduced to Britain in the 19th century and is a compact, fierce-looking bird with bright yellow eyes.
- Long Eared Owl - Highly elusive and strictly nocturnal, this secretive woodland owl is defined by its deep orange eyes and prominent, decorative feather "ear" tufts.
- Short Eared Owl - This striking, sandy-brown owl has piercing yellow eyes and long wings, which it uses to glide over wild grasslands and coastal marshes.

When to spot an owl

Short-eared and barn owls are among the easiest to see, as they often hunt in daylight hours, especially just after dawn and right before dusk. In contrast, Tawny owls are strictly nocturnal; the best time to see or hear them is at dusk and during the autumn months (from October through November), when they are most vocal and active in establishing and defending their territories. Little owls are most active at dawn and dusk, however unlike many other owls, little owls are frequently seen during the middle of the day. You can often spot them sunbathing on exposed perches or out hunting. The winter months are the best time of year to see a Long Eared Owl, as winter migrants arrive and mingle with resident birds. Like the Tawny owl, they are strictly nocturnal, so the best window to catch them leaving a roost or hunting is during the last 30 to 60 minutes of daylight into dark.

How can we help them?

Whilst we might not realise, many of us may actually be harming the local owl population by leaving bait out for rodents like rats and mice. Anticoagulant rodenticides pose a severe secondary poisoning risk to owls; an owl eating just a few poisoned mice can suffer fatal internal bleeding, often taking several days to succumb. Alternative methods of vermin control such as traps not only prevent this secondary poisoning, but also eliminate the risk of pets ingesting the bait, and ultimately being a much more humane method for the rodent too.

GREAT BUSTARD GROUP

Patron: HM King Charles III

The hand reared birds from eggs rescued last summer are now all out and exploring the Wiltshire countryside. Two of them, like the one in the picture, are carrying small GPS devices with transmitters. These record locations every hour and transmit the data twice a day. This helps us build up a picture of not only where they are, but what habitat they are using and what other factor affect their behaviour. The devices are expensive at around £1000 each, but the running costs are almost zero, so they are good value when compared to staff time, fuel costs etc over the 5 years they should last.

Many from the village have seen our display room at the village hall during our Open Weekend or the Bustard Run for vintage cars and motorcycles last month.

A super new addition to the display is a stunning diorama with a male and a female Great Bustard and two eggs. We will be adding smaller items to encourage visitors to search the diorama carefully – items such as moths, a slow worm tail and beetles. If you have anything suitable, please do let us know.

We plan to have to room open for the Halloween celebrations, please call in at see us.

The November lecture of The Arts Society - Pewsey Vale will take place on Tuesday 3rd November at 2.30pm in the Bouverie Hall. Our lecturer is Rupert Willoughby who will speak about Cool Marble! The Essential Guide to Greek Sculpture.

The Ancient Greeks invented the human portrait and their sculpture formed the basis of European art. It has, arguably, never been bettered. They produced statues of such beauty and realism that men are said to have fallen in love with them. Rupert elucidates some of their finest artistic pieces, including the controversial Parthenon or 'Elgin' marbles (the story of which is recounted in detail) and the Venus de Milo, celebrated survivor of a craze for 'naked Aphrodites'. Here is a chance to meet the Ancient Greeks in the raw. Contains nudity!

Rupert Willoughby is a writer, researcher, lecturer, & impresario of ancient Greeks, with a passion for castles, lakes and uncovering the past. He contributes regular obituaries to The Daily Telegraph, known for his light, humorous touch, his love of narrative and vivid evocations of the past.

Mix well until the mixture is combined, ensuring there are no lumps.

Welcome to the Community

There have been a significant number of arrivals and departures in the local area over the last few weeks and we would like to extend a very warm welcome to 3 families' Jancis & Robert Henman, Kate & Gary as well as Byron & Sarah Coomber and their family, who have all moved (or are moving) into East Chisenbury.

Welcome also to Alex and Michelle Hughes and family who have moved in to New Buildings.

To complete the new arrivals are Callum & Marta with their children, Harriet and Francis who have moved into Coombe.

Sky Dive!!

On 31st July this year Lucy Waight did a tandem parachute jump at Netheravon Airfield to raise money for the Farming Community Network. Her husband, family and many of her friends work in the farming industry so she sees the difficulties this essential community face daily; isolation, family relationship issues and dealing with bureaucracy. The jump was for George who is sadly no longer with us. "He said to one of our employees, 'Who is the bird in the pink hat?' He was ploughing as we were TB testing. This did wonders for my ego! So The Bird flew for George!" Lucy raised over £3,000.

Please, if you have a moment look at the website. www.fcn.org.uk

School Changes by Ian Elkins

We are finding out about changes in schools over the years. We were lucky because Mrs Bushell a retired teacher still lives in the village so we invited her into school. Mrs. Bushell started teaching in the old village school in 1931. We asked her lots of questions. When she came to our school

In the old Enford school they didn't have hot meals cooked for them; they just had sandwiches. Some of the mums brought a cooked meal from home. Today you can buy a cooked meal from school. They used to have free milk but now we have to pay 8 pence for it. We have it cold they had it heated on the "tortoise" stove.

An issue I hear raised regularly is the impact of crime and anti-social behaviour on retailers and their staff. Whilst individual incidents may seem minor, their effect can be far-reaching. Retail crime, anti-social behaviour and public disorder undermine confidence, affect trade, and discourage visitors. The reality is that strong local economies and thriving town centres depend upon people feeling safe.

Too often, offences such as shoplifting are dismissed as low-level crimes. I do not accept that. Behind every offence is a business owner dealing with loss, a member of staff facing abuse, or a resident questioning if their local high street is a place to visit. These crimes have consequences and need to be taken seriously.

Tackling retail crime and anti-social behaviour remains a priority for Wiltshire Police, my office and our partners across Wiltshire and Swindon. November's Safer Business Action Week provides an opportunity to recognise the challenges we face and the action being taken to address them. Also a reminder that making safer town centres needs businesses, police, local authorities and communities working together.

Wiltshire remains the safest force area in the South West, but we cannot afford to be complacent. Maintaining that position requires continued investment, effective policing and strong partnerships.

My expectation is clear. Residents, visitors and businesses should be able to enjoy our town and city centres with confidence. Working together, we can ensure the places at the heart of our communities remain safe and welcoming for everyone.
